

Position: NatureDays Educator

Program: EdenAcres NatureDays Programs - Forest/Farm School and Summer Outdoors Day Camps

Position Description:

Everyday we work to transform education & build community through hands-on, experiential, and nature-based learning. At the heart and soul of the Forest School program is engagement with the natural world. Through handwork, art and craft, play, and exploration, children learn how to overcome adversity, work alongside others, and develop a deeper relationship with nature. Each day children move between instructor-directed activities and self-directed play, both of which perform important roles in the holistic development of a child's heart, hands, and mind. Children learn traditional skills related to seasonal themes as well as have the opportunity to engage with the natural world on their own terms. An authentic connection to nature comes from within and self-directed play provides this opportunity. Every day we enhance teamwork and confidence through games and reflection, develop outdoor survival skills, learn native plants and stories, and spend time exploring and playing outdoors. We will spend each day doing a variety of outdoor activities, aligned with the seasons as well as with the children's ages & interests. We will spend time exploring and observing nature, tracking, and following our curiosities. All of our day will be spent outdoors, rain or shine.

As an educator for our NatureDays programs, you will be responsible for collaborating with the other educators and leadership to deliver an educational experience that meets the spirit and pedagogy of EdenAcres.

The ideal candidate for this position is someone who can work independently as well as in a team, is confident in working with children of various ages and abilities, understands and is confident in child-led, emergent, and project-based learning, enjoys being out of doors - rain or shine - , and finds a job that offers new adventures each day energizing.
